Fly Fish and Jetboat the Rakaia River into the Alps

styxmill.com/story

The Rakaia River is immense and is one of the largest braided rivers in the South Island of New Zealand.

The river is fed from the Southern Alps and travels 150 kilometres, characterised by wide shingle beds, numerous snaking channels and fast flowing water flows. The crystal clear blue waters make it popular for jet boats and it is world famous for its salmon fishing. The river moves in an easterly/south-easterly direction before entering the Pacific Ocean 50 kilometres south of Christchurch.

Photograph and Explore Double Hill, Rakaia Headwaters

styxmill.com/story

Double Hill is a unique mountain feature in the centre of the Rakaia Valley, a short drive up from Rakaia Gorge.

Situated on the south side of the river and near the main divide, Double Hill takes the full blast of the powerful nor-west winds that funnel down the valley, saturate the mountains and rapidly flood the river. An iconic landmark, Double Hill is accessible for the public via a conservation road easement through farmland and then walking track access to spectacular valley and mountain views.

Hike Sections or Complete the 3,000km Te Araroa Trail

styxmill.com/story

The Te Araroa Trail, known as the “Long Pathway” is an amazing walking track traversing the length of New Zealand.

Starting at Cape Reinga in the Far North and finishing at Bluff in Southland, it is a mixture of older tracks, walkways and sometimes link sections alongside roads. The trail winds along coastal sand, forested ridged ranges, farm land and volcanoes in the North Island, then across the national parks, huge valleys and mountain passes of the South Island.
